Belgium Headquarters in France and Belgium, Sept. 26.—German agents here report that the British General Headquarters in France, the report that serious differences have arisen between the British army medical service and the German surgeons who have been working with the British forces in France. The story has been given social publicity by its sponsors. The correspondent of the Associated Press credited to British General Headquarters, has made a careful investigation of the charges. Here is the gist of the report:

The utmost cordiality has and does exist between the British Medical Service and the Americans. The American charges have been and are quite unfounded. The charges are without foundation. As one American has put it:

"The story is a gross canard. The charges are entirely unfounded. The Germans are trying to create a rift among Belgium and French civil-

10,000 PEOPLE OUT TO GREET SOLDIERS OFF FOR THE SOUTH

Huge Crowds From Entire Country, Side Glimpses in Janesville to Speed Guardmen.

In what was probably the most stirring demonstration of loyalty recorded in the history of the city, Janesville yesterday afternoon for a few brief words with the men of the First Wisconsin regiment who passed through the city during the afternoon.

Business was suspended at three o'clock and by half past three the streets were deserted except in the neighborhood of the Northwestern tracks where for blocks the yards were lined and crowded with anxious people. Through the day and evening a stream of automobiles and buggies brought in people from every part of the county, families of the men in Company M, in Company L, in Company K, and the Port Jackson, Whitewater and Monroe units all gathered with their friends for this last chance to see the boys before their embarkation for France and the western front.

Despite the great crowds and the hundreds of motors which crowded the streets, no disorder marked the day. Families of the soldiers had little difficulty for the most part in obtaining the positions of vantage near the train, and the day was a happy one for all. The crowd was little less than the usual sight-seeing crowd at a public celebration, in that their hearts were with those who were going south, and they were speeded by relatives or dear friends, or were merely there with the crowd, the spirit of sacrifice was with them all.

Doubtless whether any other city in the country contributed so generously to the comfort of its soldiers as did Janesville yesterday when half a carload of food, magazines, and tobacco were carted down and loaded aboard the troop train. Three big days were required to haul the stuff from the Commercial club to the train, and a small army of volunteer workers were necessary to load it during the brief moments that the train passed in the city. The office of the Commercial club was literally filled with the material, and in addition to this there probably was not a man that did not receive at least one package from some friend.

All of the material sent to the company in general will be carefully apportioned by the officers among the men, while the individual packages were taken over by Captain E. N. Caldwell, who had them as soon as the train left Janesville. The gifts to the local company were but evidence of the regard in which the organization is held by all of Janesville, and the material was the kitchen details of both the headquarters company from Madison and the Machine Gun Company from Oconomowoc who assisted in loading the train, and who were not the only ones to reap the fruits of patriotism from the "home folks" for large delegations were in the city from Evansville, from Delavan, Whitewater, Port Monmouth, and the smaller towns in this and the neighboring counties. A huge truck load of gifts was divided among the Whitewater and Port Jackson companies, while nearly another load went to Company L of Beloit. All of the people from those places who could get away came to Janesville yesterday, for it was the only city where the train stopped, and nearly every visitor brought with him a package for some friend in the regiment.

Each of the five trains which came through the city early this morning at 2:40 with the supply train, was composed of ten to twelve coaches, a pullman car for the officers, big express cars fitted up as kitchen and supply cars, and two or three freight cars in which the equipment was loaded. The supply company's train also had a number of flat cars loaded down with the camp and field paraphernalia of a regiment.

Each train was met by the Bower City band and a huge delegation of people who gave the soldiers smokes and talked for a few moments even if they were strangers, and as each train pulled out a great cheer swept after the men. With the exception of the anguish of parting from relatives the men were a cheerful lot, full of optimism and anxious to get at the intensive training which will be theirs at Camp McArthur. Long streamer banners, expressive of the men's particular desire in regard to the end of the Kaiser and the part they hope to play in it, were displayed on the sides of the cars, while from out every window of the long train khaki clad figures hung in an effort to make the most of the few moments they were in town. Through the efforts of Mayor Fathers and the members of his committee the entire celebration went off without a hitch. Everything had been provided for the gifts were on hand promptly, the streets were carefully policed and the great crowd practically had the run of the railroad yards during the time the trains were stopped at the freight depot.

The efforts of the men who took charge of the collection of tobacco were especially fruitful for enough cigars and cigars were dropped up with the donations to last the entire company for some time. David Markowitz, William Langdon, Robert Dalley and Mr. Ball of the Wisconsin Tobacco Company were the leaders in the campaign.

So much was supplied yesterday that the large collection tossed into Bob Hockett's window was not given to the men, the window will be kept open until Monday for any further contributions of tobacco, gum, magazines and other non-perishable gifts which will then be shipped to the boys at Mr. Hockett's expense.

With the Bower City Band were nine Evansville bandmen who took the opportunity of joining forces with the local musicians as a mark of patriotism and loyalty to the Evansville boys in Company M. As each train pulled in the band struck up a march, and sped the departing troops with the men of the First Wisconsin of the Badger regiments.

The trip south will consume about four days, during which time the men are all under careful regulations. But they travel in palatial comfort orders will detain for a few moments brisk exercise to loosen up the kinks of travel. Each company has its own cooks and supply officers who are given a big expense account for the preparation of meals. Big barrels of water, which is constantly replenished, are placed on the platforms for the men, and so far as is possible in a coach the men are made for their comfort during the journey.

The transportation of the men in day coaches for as long a trip as this has been regarded as too hard a task, but they travel in palatial comfort compared to the troops of our allies, who take long, tiresome journeys in small, springless freight cars, on the side of which appears in large letters the word "Chevrolet" and which in English means that the cars are used either for forty men or for eight horses, according to the needs of the occasion.

DESCRIBES WORK OF "Y" IN FRONT LINE

Ted Schroeder, Former Milwaukee Association Man, Describes Trench Life at Annual Dinner.

"Eighteen hundred shells a minute are hourly hurled into the Russian trenches," said T. B. Schroeder, former secretary of the Milwaukee "Y," at the annual fall dinner, at the local Y. M. C. A. "I have seen men come back from the trenches after 36 hours, straight, of such terrific bombardment, who were just ready to drop," he said. "The nerves of the men are frayed, and they are completely exhausted. According to Mr. Schroeder, the men are never fully fit to come back to the first line of trenches again. Mr. Schroeder said that there is a belief that the Y. M. C. A. works behind the lines; that is an error. The Y. M. C. A. men go right into the very first line of trenches, and build their huts so that they cannot be seen by the enemy airplanes. According to Mr. Schroeder, the work on the battle fronts is exactly the same as done back home. He also expressed his appreciation of the work done and for the campaign, which will be set in motion on Friday to get 750 new members for the local Y. M. C. A. work."

A. C. Preston, boys' secretary, was introduced, he spoke of the work that a now being done for the boys. Mr. Preston is the "Big Chief" in the boys division. He is at present working on the schedule for the coming year, and is looking for a good secretary for the boys for the next year. Newspaper carrier boys will be enlisted this week and next week. The dinner was a success, greatly appreciated by all present. The people present were representative of that class who take a big interest in Y. M. C. A. work.

SEED CORN YIELD LOWERED BY FROST

Frost Damages Up to Ninety Per Cent in Some Counties—Urge Care of What is Left.

Damage amounting to a loss of ninety per cent of the seed corn of the state in some counties is reported by G. J. Burt of the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been making a survey of the corn in Rock county in co-operation with County Agricultural Agent L. A. Markham.

The shortage which the state faces is a menacing one and farmers whose crops have not been affected are urged to dry the corn with the greatest care as it will command high prices on the market this season. Mr. Markham urged all men with corn to communicate with him as soon as possible. In Rock county they found that considerable corn has been frosted, about thirty per cent of the entire yield, and as much of the corn has not yet ripened, the danger still faces the farmer. There were, however, several fields which will produce fine seed corn, some of the Silver King being among the best found by the federal agent. Mr. Burt states that a large part of the state will produce no seed corn this year, consequently the demand for that from this county will be large. The frosted corn thirty per cent in this county, ninety in others, is used largely for silage. It is light and has but small feeding value.

JANESVILLE BOYS NOW WITH U. S. ARMY

Alonzo Pond and Orson Loomis Enlist For Period of War With Ambulance Corps.

Alonzo Pond and Orson Loomis, Janesville boys who have been in the ambulance service in France since early this summer, are now enlisted in the United States Army. The field hospital service. The unit with which they went to France was called into the American service, recently and the men were given the choice of enlisting for the duration of the war or returning home. Both Pond and Loomis enlisted and will remain on the Western front during the war. The boys went over in the Red Cross Ambulance Service, paying their own expenses and receiving only their rations and housing as pay. With the arrival of American troops at the front, however, the various ambulance units created under army service were called into co-operation with the army as enlisted soldiers.

Monday's Markets. Chicago, Sept. 25.—Yesterday's cattle receipts, estimated at 38,000, were the largest since Oct. 23, 1911, when 32,024 were received, and compared with 49,128 on Nov. 16, 1908, which proved a record.

Cattle prices broke badly yesterday, although the top at $17.50 was only 5¢ under the record made last Wednesday. However, there were no other sales above $17, which shows how scarce strictly prime cattle are at this time.

Feeders are still fairly urgent bidders for thin lambs and yesterday they paid 18.25 for some from Idaho, while a year ago the same class went to $10.85. No lambs yesterday sold above $17.50 to killers and only rangers passed $17.

Packers, shippers and speculators all paid as high as $19 for hogs yesterday. Improved quality forced the average 20¢ higher, to highest point in over a month. Armour's drove cost $13.42, being 62¢ per 100 lbs. above previous Monday.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $15.60, against $18.40 Saturday, $18 a week ago, $10.75 a year ago and $7.62 two years ago.

Cattle Prices Decline. Most grades of cattle yesterday sold 25¢@50¢ lower, being the first severe decline in several weeks. Bulls of a prime bologna class were not much weaker, but other bulls usually sold 15¢@25¢ lower. Calves were largely 50¢ lower, a few reaching $15.75.

It cures corns and callous spots. Just the thing for breaking in new shoes. Used by British and French troops.

Stockers and feeders were in good demand, but prices were off mostly 25¢. Although top steers made $17.85, few others went above $16. Quotations:

Choice to fancy steers $16.50@17.85; Fearlings, fair to fancy 11.75@12.25; Fat cows and heifers 8.00@12.50; Canning cows and cutters 5.15@6.50; Native bulls and stags 6.15@10.35; Feeding cattle, 600@1,100 6.50@10.85; Poor to fancy veal calves 10.00@15.75; Western range steers 7.00@15.50.

Hogs in New Gain. Hogs sold largely 10¢@15¢ higher yesterday, but quality was better, and the average price showed 25¢ gain, although top at 19 was only 10¢ up.

Trade was healthy and pens were well cleared, the price range gradually getting narrower. Pigs were not very numerous and, with good prices, ruled unevenly higher. Quotations:

Bulk of sales $18.20@18.96; Heavy butchers and ship 18.85@19.00; Light butchers, 190@230 18.85@19.00; Light bacon, 145@190 lbs. 18.20@19.00; Heavy packing, 260@400 18.00@18.60; Mixed packing, 200@250 17.95@18.50; Rough, heavy packing 17.60@17.85.

Poor to best pigs, 60@1.35; Lambs, common to fancy 14.50@18.25; Light to heavy, 120@135 14.25@18.00; Mixed, 80 lbs. dockage per head 18.25@18.90.

Lambs Show New Drop. Fat lambs declined 25¢@50¢ yesterday and feeding grades were steady owing to scarcity. Trade was irregular from start to finish, and early trading was limited, none of the range was selling to killers until noon. Feeders paid up to $15.25 for Idaho lambs, best to killers going at $17.50, with top natives $17. Most ewes went at $11. Quotations:

Lambs, common to fancy 14.50@18.25; Lambs, poor to good culls 12.00@13.50; Yearlings, poor to best 11.50@14.00; Wethers, poor to best 11.00@12.60; Ewes, inferior to choice 1.50@11.25; Bucks, common to choice 7.00@9.00.

"There's a Reason"

OFFER 3 MILLION ACRES FOR SHEEP

Marquette, Mich., Sept. 25.—Governor of Michigan, and Wisconsin, heads of the agricultural colleges, and prominent state officials and business men have been invited to meet at Marquette, Mich., on Oct. 1, to discuss the offer of the National Wool Growers' association, Salt Lake City, Utah, who will speak on the wool situation in the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau of Michigan, is calling the meeting as the result of the Great wool convention which was held in Chicago and at which it was learned that the wool situation was a serious situation as the result of the new home law permitting persons to take up 640 acres.

The proposition is that the Michigan Wool Growers' association, which is located at the right lands, and other advantages just right for sheep and cattle raising that they have been offering to give up three million acres of cut land to the state and are offering it for three years to men who know the sheep and cattle business, providing they pay the taxes. Many land owners are making every effort to get rid of the land, and some capitalists are so certain that they can make money grazing that they are offering to financially assist men who know the business.

A Nut-Made Butter

Made From Cocoanuts at the Price of ANIMAL FAT-MADE Oleomargarine

This is to users of oleomargarine. Also to butter users who rebel at butter's cost. Some Old-World scientists have solved the problem of making butter out of cocoanuts. Think of that. It is made entirely from that delicious nut-meat which you use in shredded form on cake.

It is churned with milk to give it butter flavor. A capsule of butter color comes in every carton. So it looks and tastes like butter of the finest grade. But this vegetable fat all comes from Tropic cocoanuts.

The Name Is Troco

This product is called Troco. It is made in Milwaukee by the Troco Nut Butter Company, in a model modern creamery.

We use the identical process which is used in Europe, where this new delicacy was created.

Any grocer will supply it to you under this guarantee:

"If one pound of Troco fails to prove itself the best article you ever tasted in place of butter, we will gladly return your money."

Made from Cocoanuts

The usual oleomargarine is made, as you know, from beef fat, hog fat and often cotton seed oil. It is churned with milk, as Troco is, to give it butter flavor.

It is a cleanly, healthful product. But lard and oleo and cotton seed oil seem uninviting spreads. That's why so many cling to butter, despite the butter cost.

But Troco comes from the white meat of the cocoanut. No food in the world is more appealing.

BEGIN NOW

competitive test. Both your palate and your pocketbook will decide in favor of Troco. If you are not pleased, your money back.

TROCO NUT BUTTER COMPANY, Milwaukee, Wis.
THE SHURTLEFF COMPANY, Distributors, Janesville, Wis.

It has the same food value as butter. It looks and tastes like butter. And you rarely find a butter so pure and sweet as Troco.

Greater Economy

Troco costs about the same as high-grade oleomargarine. Its use will save you much, as compared with butter at the average price.

You sacrifice nothing whatever. You get no lard, no oleo in it. You get no cotton seed oil. You get nothing but the fat of the cocoanut, churned with milk and salted.

For your own sake, try one pound. It will be a revelation. If you are not delighted, get your money back.

Notice: Under the law, all butter substitutes must be branded Oleomargarine. That law was passed before Troco was invented. So the Troco package is branded "Oleomargarine" though there is no oleo in it.

All butter substitutes must also pay an extra tax if colored. So the color for Troco comes in a capsule. Add it yourself, as you do with oleomargarine.

Order a pound or two of Troco today. Your dealer has it, or can get it easily. Put Troco to a competitive test. Both your palate and your pocketbook will decide in favor of Troco. If you are not pleased, your money back.

The Universal Creamery Will Give Free Whey to Milk Producers Who Bring Their Milk Here

This liberal offer is being taken advantage of daily by an increasing number of milk producers in this territory. They appreciate what it means to receive free whey for their stock feeding.

We must have several thousand pounds of milk additional every day as our business is rapidly increasing. The milk sent here is used in the manufacture of cheeses which go to every part of America.

Farmers who send their milk to this company are helping Mr. Hoover in his great work of food conservation and are directly helping this nation to win the war.

BY EXAMPLE.

Evidently this nation must be taught by example. Too long have the people been free and independent of any right beyond that of the law with its long, strong arm, that in the crisis of the nation, and in certain discontented farmers who have raised wheat, one of the essential foods of the civilized world, who anticipated a three dollar a bushel price for their plentiful harvest, who now that they find that the government has fixed a price of two dollars and twenty cents, propose to feed their wheat to their stock rather than sell it and ship it to the market.

They forget that this nation is at war with foreign power that does not hesitate to confiscate the individuals' property, to demand that they give even the metal in their family pieces to be made into bullets, and that the food supply is limited, bread issued by tickets, meat, oil, but a few days of the week, and then only in limited quantities, all because the government would conserve the food supply for the fighting men.

In the countries of the allies they have passed rigid food restrictions and the grain fed to the cattle is limited in the extreme. The foods needed to sustain life are conserved and the threat of an agricultural element to feed their grain to the cattle because of the high prices of other feeds
in place of conserving out would result in immediate confiscation of the supply in sight.

It is distressing to consider such a condition, but it is safe to say that the powers given the food dictator to conserve this nation's grain supply also gives him power to seize supplies that are being wasted by such a method. With beef at the high price it is, with milk selling at unheard of prices, to use needed wheat to fatten stock for the market is but a little thing of which to think.

Surely there is a law that prohibits this with the winter coming on, and the need of every bushel of grain to be ground into food supplies for the individuals left behind in this struggle we can not permit such a condition to be created. We have taught this world by example thus far; let us not forget that we must continue the work.

Right here at home in Rock county
such talk is heard, but let us hope that those who utter it are merely talking and not in earnest. We need fat beef cattle but we need the grain supply even more. We need everything the land can produce for it is by starvation of the enemy and the furnishing of good, sound food to our own troops
we may hope to win. Let the example be to let the world begin right here at home.

A PART FOR ALL.

Even the school child can play its part in this great problem of ours that has been brought home with startling suddenness by the war. The past session has demonstrated that there is much to be done at home—behind the actual firing lines—the fighting and the work of the soldiers and sailors and the making of "comfort kits."
The Red Cross work and countless other tasks that will fill many a spare moment for the average woman and child.

The past few months have demonstrated what can be accomplished in the line of increasing the food supply of the nation by gardening. When many a garden died from lack of care during the winter growing period, still the work this year has aided naturally in preparing for the coming year's work that must be completed and in this, as in the past, the average school child can play their part.

Outside of the learning of the rudiments of education our local schools teach many useful things not found in books. This is supplemented by the work of the Scouts, the various singing clubs, the church organizations so that the average boy or girl really understands the real problem
of life and what confronts the nation.

The wide awake boy or girl of today does not have to look in a dictionary or encyclopedia to discover who Kerensky, or Hoover, or Luxemburg are but knows from reading the everyday papers and the current literature.
Just so they absorb much that will be of use in the work of the future.
Prof. W. S. Depue, in agriculture at the Janesville high school does much along this line of developing, as do the classes in domestic science.
The "Doll Club," diminutive in its name, but great in its scope, is another agent toward the development of the younger generation, and now
last, but not least, comes the proposed organizations of the junior Red Cross work.

MOURNING IN TIME OF WAR.

The suggestion is made by the Dry Goods Economist, that during war time women discard the habit of wearing black for lost friends. This is urged on the ground of scarcity of clothing
materials, and the depressing influence of black in a time of national sorrow.

It may be that by next year
the loss of their boys, a large part of them would no doubt like to see of black. In times of grief women find a certain reserve about mingling with gay life. The black dress is a conviction that they are in sorrow,
and should not be pressed into scenes of merriment.

The wearing of black does tend to set a person apart a little, and it often makes women morbid. They seek solitude and avoid their friends as much as they can. They get in a habit of brooding and often become very abnormal.
It would have been much better if at the start they could have picked up their courage and gone with their friends.

Yet there is a question if, not merely in war time, but always, this attitude is not unwholesome and sometimes selfish. It does create an atmosphere of gloom. Men are feeling this depressing influence, tell their wives never to put on black for them. They hate to leave behind this perpetual suggestion of funerals.

Few men wear black for bereavement, though the custom of wearing a black band on the arm is common.
Men feel sorrow as much as women, yet are forced by the pressure of work to leave it all behind them, and go on day by day as before. It is better for them and better for women to do so, and of doubtful value to keep reminding others that their hearts are grieving. It would not be the wish of the soldier boys whom we shall leave in France, that their bright home country should emphasize the sorrow
it feels in any external way.

Some men claim exemption from the draft because they are needed at home to support their families, but they do not do anything for their families as they expect to be called in the draft.

The middlemen aren't saying anything against the price fixing idea, they expect will hold down the producer's price and help them get the same old figure out of the consumer.

Those people who have been getting out defective shells should be put down right on top of them and kept there while the explosive power of the same is given a thorough test.

The Kaiser's answer to his people's demand for a more democratic government was to allow the people to celebrate the capture of Riga at the expense of the taxpayers.

The people who say Germany has won the war claim we should have gone in earlier, and if we had gone in earlier they would have said we were too hasty.

It would not be safe to drive the I.
W. W. out of the country, as any citizen country that we drove them into would have a cause of war against us.

One and two dollar bills are reported scarce, but one occasionally can keep them five or ten minutes while walking from the office to the grocer's.

The government is proposing to economize by cutting out many rural mail routes, but of course it can't be done in any congressman's district.

The men enthusiastically promote the canning season by giving hearty moral support to their wives who are doing the work.

It is pretty hard to stop reckless driving of automobiles when so many people feel flattered if they get complained of.

If the Russians won't fight for Russia, at least the snowflakes will soon.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

INTERNATIONALISM.

Oh, Rabindranath Tagore, are you on the other shore? Have you cashed your psychic checks? Will we hear from you no more? Where's your old poetic fad? Has it gone plumb to the bad? Voice of India, draw nigh, in your turban, wide and high, in your lavender nightgown and your sandals, and tell us what things have taken such a slump, why they've fallen with a bump that has crushed the cattle out,
which amazed the common chump.
Just sound the dismal dirge for that brand of cosmic urge which you poetized upon us with a varicolored plurage? To the ordinary gink it was beautiful to think of the brotherhood of flesh till war put it on the block. Oh, Rabindranath Tagore, with your mysteries galore, do not use the raven's stuff; do not murmur
"Nevermore."

Switzerland is a small body of land
entirely surrounded by war.
When they want to make the holes in the Swiss cheese they just hang it up in front of the border and the German, French, Austrian and Italian bullets
do the rest.

Of all those Russian diplomats we are in favor of Lvoff. He is the easiest to remember, offhand.

Just to prove that conditions are not as bad as they might be in some localities, and that some people have been able to make money, we would like to emphasize the fact that an automobile was stolen from a Waldorf-Astoria bellhop the other day.
And no money came when even the hotel guests can afford them.

A LITTLE SLICE OF LIFE.

A young lady with a pair
Of those long ivory jabbers was Standing in a crowded car Knitting a green something for somebody.

Whose entity is debited by censor
So as to fool the Kaiser.
When the car lurched and she ruined
The good right ear of a young man
Who had been backed.
The car lurched and she Punctured the left eye
Of another young man of Military age. Is that What we call efficiency in this country?

If all the young ladies keep on Knitting in crowded places,
Who will be left to help
Make the world safe
For democracy?

CHUMP SLOGAN NO. 5,983.

Sign in a bank in the west:
"God blesses families who eat potatoes with the skins on."
And we used to chuckle quietly at the Kaiser for yelling "Gott mit uns."

IT WOULD COME RIGHT HANDY.
If we could cultivate with care
The movie actor's haughty glare,
We'd surely try to make it pay
And use it forty times a day.
Whenever we desired to snub
Most any irritating dub.
If one should come to borrow pencils, Our haughty glare would speed him
hence,
We'd glare at those too fresh and smart
And they would tremble and depart.
The lad who comes to sell a book,
We'd freeze him with a haughty look
Had we the hauteur and the air,
The very cold and chilling glare.
The lifted brows, and all such rot
That every movie actor's got.

POSTPONE TRIAL OF

ukee baseball club, charged with the murder of Clarence Bheil, a negro waiter, was postof an attorney in the case caused the

Just Folks

(By Edgar A. Guest.)

THE BOY'S ADVENTURE.
Dear Father, he wrote me from somewhere in France
Where, waiting with Pershing to lead the advance,
There's little the censor permits me
to tell
Save the fact that I'm here and am happy and well.
The French people cheered as we marched from our ship
At the close of a really remarkable trip.
They danced and they screamed and they shouted and ran
And I blush as I write. I was kissed by a man!

I've seen a great deal since I bade
you good-bye,
I have witnessed a battle far up in the sky;
I have heard the dull roar of a long line of guns,
And seen the destruction that's
worked by the Hun;
Some scenes I'll remember and
each I'll not forget.
But the welcome he gave me! I'm feeling it yet.
Oh try to imagine your boy if you can
As he looked and he felt, being kissed by a man!

"Ah Meestaire!" he cried in a voice
that was shrill
And his queer little eyes with delight
seemed to fill.
And before I was wise to the custom,
or knew
Just what he was up to about me he threw
His arms and he hugged me and then with a squeak
He planted a chaste little kiss on each cheek.
He was stocky and strong and his
"whiskers" were tan.
Now please keep it dark. I've been kissed by a man.

COPPER ONLY COIN AT PAR IN FRANCE

Paris, Sept. 25.—Traffic in copper coins which frequently has been denounced during the past two years is still going on in France. In a great many stores, tobacco shops, groceries, bakeries, and meat markets, at ticket offices of transportation lines and places of amusement, sous and double sous are taken in all through the day and evening, and none giving out if it can be avoided. Subway and tramway employees have even refused to sell tickets unless the passengers offer the exact change. Theater and moving picture box offices are also collectors of copper.

The result of investigation was a circular to commissaires of police, calling upon them to enforce the regulations and procure every person speculating in copper money, and to send to police headquarters the names of every employee of any public service refusing to make change without a plausible reason.

There has been a regular market
for coppers at the Place Gambetta where subway employees and other collectors bring sous and double sous in rolls and dispose of them at a bonus of 10 per cent. The buyers get back the premium they pay for this small change and make an additional profit of 15 per cent through illicit exportation to Switzerland. Through French paper and silver money is at a discount there, copper money, curiously enough, passes at par, which has provoked the systematic traffic which the police propose to stop.

sion of the milk producers' association which supplies the city, to add 30c

EVANSVILLE HONORS DEPARTING SOLDIERS

Evansville, Sept. 23.—(Evansville) turned out en masse to do honor to Company M leaving Camp Douglas for Texas yesterday afternoon, for in that company are officers of Evansville's highest honor, who volunteered for service for their country's defense. A mammoth delegation went to Janesville, hoping for a better opportunity of seeing the soldier boys, for not one of the many sections stopped in Evansville, but whizzed right through. Every car owner here—and their names are legion—filled their cars, and in many cases they were filled to overflowing, and left for the flower city. From twelve-thirty on, there was a constant procession of automobiles going to Janesville. Crowds boarded the 2:30 train and for the country's sake, a large number of the Evansville military band boys joined forces with the flower city band to render inspiring music as the several sections passed through Janesville. Delegations from the baker shops and creamery took the afternoon off to do honor to the soldier boys on that way south. At both towns, citizens poured out money had been collected to give to the boys and these were presented during the stop in Janesville. All kinds of individual gifts and donations were taken to the receiving station and to the coaches. Those remaining in Evansville made a point to be at the station as the boys passed through. The boys, who were full of patriotism, everyone who passed could see, and to wish them good luck, one and all. "Good luck, God bless you, good-bye."

NO VILLAIN IN THIS PLAY
A play without a villain aptly describes "Auld Lang Syne." In fact, there is place for villains in the charming comedy which the country's leading Scotchmen who a bonnie lassie in their native heath, or where a little child is lost in the hills and found by a faithful collie. There is a quarrel between the two men over a broken, not to be mended until the final reconciliation scene over the restored child. This delightful picture, presented with rare identity as to setting, features Harry Morey, Text Johnson and Florence Turner.

FINE SCENERY IN MINTER'S NEXT
They used up almost half of the wonderful scenery around Ben Lomond, fifteen miles from Santa Cruz, Cal., making scenes for the forthcoming Mary Miles Minter production entitled "Peggy Leads the Val," and a squad of two extra players made the trip to support the regular cast of eight players. Charles Turner, Dazey wrote the scenario and Elizabeth Mahoney adapted it. There are two players for this picture. One of them is Andrew Artuckle, a screen player of varied experience, and Charles Stockdale, Alan Forrest will again play the leading man for Mary Miles Minter.

Harry Hilliard will return to his first love, the stage. Hilliard, it is rumored, desired to be known as a star in his own right. When it was decided that he stick to leads, he was demanded to make up the speaking stage again. He was a big favorite before entering the photo play field and should repeat.

the floor for a more careful inspection. The gleam in the surgeon's eye disappeared. From ball to heel, the bottom of the foot was flat. So was its mate. The surgeon shook his head. "Oh, I'm all right, doctor," pleaded the big fellow, who was Louis Weed of Antigo, Wis. "Never mind the weight on the foot, I'll outwalk any man in the regiment. I'm used to hoofing 20 miles a day. My feet never hurt. Why, say—"

"Next," said the surgeon, with an expression of regret. There was nothing pleasant about writing "flat" on the military career of a man like Weed, but the regulations bar flat feet.

Weed appealed to his commanding officer, Capt. Edwin W. Allen of Company I.

"There ought to be a place for me somewhere in the army," he insisted. Capt. Allen agreed and an effort will be made to find it.

WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR.

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple homemade canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist, and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you. Adv.

THE GROWING GIRL

A girl when in her teens is passing through a critical period of her life. The transition from childhood to maturity is not always easy; consequently, in many cases health breaks down entirely and the girl goes into a decline and dies young. If she escapes this fate, she may fall into a state of permanent ill-health. It is of the utmost importance, in order to insure normal and healthy development, that proper precautions be taken, and nothing has proved more helpful than the faithful use of Lydia E. "Come straight to the reception at the Whitehall rooms," she begged. "Sir Edward is calling for me, and Grailiot will go down with us. Later, if you care to, you can drive me home."

"Don't you think," he suggested, "that it would be rather a good opportunity to announce our engagement?"

"Not tonight!" she pleaded. "You know, I cannot seem to believe in myself except when I am with you and we are alone. It seems too wonderful after all these years. Do you know, John, that I am nearly thirty?"

"How pathetic! All the more reason, I should say, why we should let people know about it as soon as possible."

"There is no particular hurry," she said, a little nervously. "Let me get used to it myself. I don't think you will have to wait long. Everything I have been used to doing and thinking seems to be crumbling up around me. Last night I even hated my work, or at least part of it."

His eyes lit up with genuine pleasure.

"I can't tell you how glad I am to hear you say that," he declared. "I don't hate your work—I've got over that. I don't think I am narrow about it. I admire Grailiot, and his play is wonderful. But I think, and I always shall think, that the denouement in that third act is abominable!"

She nodded understandingly.

"I am beginning to realize how you must feel," she confessed. "We won't talk about it any more now. Drive me to the theater, will you? I want to be there early tonight, just to get everything ready for changing afterward."

The reception in honor of the little company of French tragedians, at which almost the whole of the English stage and a sprinkling of society people were present, was a complete success. Louise made a charming hostess, and Sir Edward more than ever justified his reputation for saying the right thing to the right person at the right moment. The rooms were crowded with throngs of distinguished people, who all seemed to have plenty to say to one another.

The only person, perhaps, who found himself curiously ill at ease was John. He heard nothing but French on all sides of him—a language which he read with some facility, but which he spoke like a schoolboy. He had been wandering about for more than an hour before Louise discovered him. She at once left her place and crossed the room to where he was standing by the wall.

"Cheer up!" she begged, with a delightful smile. "I am afraid that you are being bored to death. Will you not come and be presented to our guests?"

"For goodness' sake, no!" John implored. "I have never seen one of them act, and my French is appalling. I am all right, dear. It's quite enough pleasure to see you looking so beautiful, and to think that I am going to be allowed to drive you home afterward."

Louise looked into a neighboring mirror, and gazed critically at her own reflected image. She had a curious feeling that at that precise moment she had reached the zenith of her power and her charm. Her audience at the theater had been wonderfully sympathetic, had responded with rare appreciation to every turn of her voice, to every movement and gesture. The compliments, too, which she had been receiving from the crowds who had bent over her fingers that night had been no idle words.

She was conscious, acutely conscious, of the atmosphere she had created around her. She was glorying in the subtle outward signs of it. She was in love with herself, in love, too, with this delightful new feeling of loving. It would have given her more joy than anything else in the world, to that moment of her triumph, to have passed her arm through John's, to have led him up to them all, and to have said:

"After all, you see, I am a very simple sort of woman. I have done just the sort of simple thing that other women do, and I am glad of it—very glad and very happy!"

Her lips moved to the music of her thoughts. John leaned toward her.

"Did you say anything?" he asked.

"No," she said, "I was just thinking of you."

"No," she said, "I was just thinking of you."

"You dear stupid, or course I did not! Or if I did, it was just one of those little whispers to oneself which mean nothing, yet which count for so much. Can I not do anything to make you enjoy yourself more? I shall have to go back to my guests now. We are expecting a royal personage, and those two dears who keep so close to my side do not speak a word of English."

"Please go back, dear," John begged promptly. "It was nice of you to come at all. And here's Sophy at last, thank goodness! Now I am all right."

She laid her fingers upon his arm. "You must take me back to my place," she said. "Then you can go and talk nonsense to Sophy."

They were back in the crowd now, and she dismissed him with a little nod. He made his way quickly to the spot where he had seen Sophy. To his disappointment, she had disappeared. Grailiot, however, came up and seized him by the arm.

"Still playing the moth, my young friend?" he exclaimed. "Aren't the wings sufficiently burned yet?"

"I am afraid it's become a permanent role," John replied, as the two men shook hands. "Where have you been all these weeks, and why haven't you been to see me?"

"Paris, my dear young friend—Paris and life! Now I am back again—I am not sure that I know why. I came over with these French people, to see them start their theater. Forgive me, I have not paid my respects to our hostess. We shall meet again presently."

He strolled off, and a few minutes later John found Sophy.

"How late you are!" he grumbled. "I couldn't help it," she answered. "This is the only evening dress I possess at present, and I had to mend it before it was decent to come out in. Why are you wandering about alone? Haven't Louise been kind to you?"

"She has been charming," John declared promptly, "but she is surrounded with all sorts of people I don't know. I can't help her. For one thing, my French is absurd. Then they are all talking about things which I don't understand in the least."

Sophy remained silent for a moment. Then she took John's arm and led him to the buffet.

"Give me an ice and a cigarette, will you, please? You are a dear, practical person, but you are as much out of this world as a human being well could be!"

John waited upon her without any further remark. The prince of Seyre, passing through, bowed to them. John looked after his retreating figure. An irresistible impulse seized him.

"Sophy," he asked, sitting down by her side, "tell me, why have the prince and Louise always been such great friends?"

Sophy looked steadfastly at her ice.

"I suppose because the prince is a very clever and cultivated person," she said. "He has been of great assistance to Louise several times. It was he who financed Miles Faraday when he put on this play of Grailiot's. Grailiot hasn't a penny, you know, and poor Miles was almost broke after three failures."

"That was just an investment," John remarked irritably. "He will get his money back again."

"Of course," Sophy agreed. "I think the prince generally manages to get value for what he does in life."

"You don't think Louise ever thought of caring for him, do you?" John persisted.

Sophy paused until she had lit a cigarette. The expression in her face, when she looked up at John, irritated him vaguely. It was as if she were talking to a child.

"I think," she said, "you had better ask Louise that question yourself, don't you?"

He asked it an hour or so later, when at last the party of guests had taken their leave, and, somewhat to the well-bred surprise of the one or two friends who lingered, Louise had beckoned to John to take her out to her car. Her hand had sought his at once, her head rested a little wearily but very contentedly upon his shoulder.

"Louise, dear," he began, "I asked Sophy a question tonight which I ought to have asked you. Quite properly, she told me so!"

"Nice little soul, Sophy!" Louise murmured. "What was it, John?"

"Once or twice I have wondered," he went on, "whether you have ever cared in any sort of way, or come near to caring, for the prince of Seyre?"

For a moment she made no movement. Then she turned her head and looked at him. The sleepy content had gone from her eyes.

"Why do you ask?"

"Isn't it quite a natural question from a jealous man who believes that everyone who sees you must be in love with you? You have seen a great deal of the prince, haven't you, in the last few years? He understands you art. There are many things that you and he have in common."

Louise was looking out of the window at the thin stream of people still passing along Piccadilly. She seemed suddenly to have become only the shadow of her former brilliant self.

"I think that once—perhaps twice," she confessed, "I came very near to caring for him."

"And now?" she repeated, suddenly gripping John's hands. "I tell you that I am very much nearer hating him. So much for the prince! In ten minutes we shall be at home, and you are such a dear stupid about coming in. You must try to say all the nice things in the world to me quickly—in ten minutes!"

"How shall I begin?" he whispered. She leaned once more toward him.

"You don't need any hints," she murmured. "You're really quite good at it!"

CHAPTER XX.

The ten minutes passed very much too quickly. She was gone, and John, thrilled though he was through all his senses by the almost passionate fervor of her leave-taking, found himself once more confronted by that little black demon. There was something about all of them, all these people whom he knew to be his friends, which seemed to him to savor of a conspiracy. There was nothing that could be put into definite shape—just the ghost of torturing, impossible thoughts. He was in no humor to go home. Changing the order he had first given to the chauffeur, he was driven instead to a small Bohemian club which he had joined at Grailiot's instigation. He had a vague hope that he might find the great dramatist there. There were no signs of him, however, in the smoking room, or anyone else whom John knew.

He threw himself into an easy chair and ordered a whisky-and-soda. Two men close at hand were writing at desks; others were lounging about, discussing the evening's reception. One man, sitting upon the table, a recognized authority, was treating the company to a fluent dissertation upon modern actresses, winding up by contrasting Louise Maurel's style with that of her chief French rival, John found himself listening with pleased interest. The man's opinion was certainly not unfavorable to Louise.

"It is only in the finer shades of emotionalism," the critic declared, "that these French actresses get at us a little more completely even than Louise Maurel. Do you know the reason? I'll tell you. It is because they live the life. They have a dozen new emotions in a season. They make a cult of feeling. They use their brains to dissect their passions. They cut their own life into small pieces and give us the result without concealment. That is where they score, if anywhere. This Mme. Latrobe, who opens over here tomorrow night, is in love at the present moment with Jean Tourbet. She had an affair with that Italian poet in the summer, so they tell me. She was certainly in Madrid in October with Bretoldi, the sculptor. These men are all great artists. Think what she must have learned from associating with them! Now Louise Maurel, so far as we know, has never had but one affair, the prince of Seyre, and has been faithful to him all the time."

It was out at last! John had heard it spoken in plain words. The black demon upon which his hand had laid so heavily, was alive now, without a doubt, jeering at him, mocking at him—alive and self-assertive in the sober words of the elderly, well-bred man who lounged upon the table.

For a moment or two John was stunned. A wild impulse assailed him to leap up and confront them all, to choke the lie back down the throat of the man who had uttered it. Every nerve in his body was tingling with the desire for action. The stupor of his senses alone kept him motionless, and a strange, incomprehensible clarity of thought. He realized exactly how things were. This man had not spoken idly, or as a scandal-monger. He had spoken what he had accepted as a fact, what other people believed.

John rose to his feet and made his way toward the door. His face showed little sign of disturbance. He even nodded to some men whom he knew slightly. As he passed down the stairs, he met Grailiot. Then once more his self-control became in danger. He seized the Frenchman savagely by the arm.

"Come this way," he said, leading him toward the card-room. "Come in here! I want to speak to you."

He locked the door—a most unheard-of and irregular proceeding. Grailiot felt the coming of the storm.

She was a fair-haired lady, an actress by profession and dainty withal. Her headgear consisted of a bowlike foundation, from which protruded plumes mounted on slender wires. She sauntered into a theater and took her seat to witness the great play, "Ashamed of Her Brother."

There was a touch on her hat. Lordly and haughtily she turned. "Does my hat annoy you?" she asked.

"Not at all," replied the person behind her.

The spotlight favorite thought for a thing she feared she had been ungracious, and, like Dick Whittington, she turned again.

"Perhaps my plumes interfere with your view?" she suggested, more amiably.

"Oh, no, thank you," replied the self-possessed young woman; "I've bent 'em back."

It was the office of the great sporting newspaper, and the golf editor was taking a brief holiday. In his absence the inquiries from readers which the golfing man answered through his correspondence column were given to the racing editor.

"Which is the better course," an ardent follower of the royal and ancient game asked, "to fuzzle one's putter or to futter on the tee?"

The racing man tilted back in his chair and smoked five cigarettes before taking his pen in hand. Then, when he had come to a decision on the eighty problem, he wrote as follows:

"Should a player snuggle his iron, it is permissible for him to fuzzle his putter, but better play would be to fiddle his putter into the pringle and fuddle it out with a niblick."

LEAGUE TITLE NOW ASSURED TO GIANTS

By Winning From St. Louis, Monday, New York is Certain to Win League Title.

It is now an assured fact that Janesville fans will be able to see the Giants and the White Sox hook up in the world's series in Chicago this fall. New York clinched their claim to the national league title on Monday when they won from St. Louis, while Chicago put themselves in a safe side of the column last Friday.

Now that the games are assured the talk has shifted from what teams will win in the respective leagues to the teams which will win the world's title. To the present time there has been little betting on the result as the fans are waiting for some advance dope to be given out by the two managers.

The betting in New York, although it has been very light, gives the Giants the edge which of course should be expected in that city. In Chicago the followers of the White Sox are confident that Rowland's men will be returned winner in the big series.

New York fans are basing their predictions not upon the showing of McGraw's men during the season, but more upon the ability which they can show if put to the test. It is claimed in New York that the team was not pushed throughout the season, with the result that the Giants have plenty left in reserve for the games with the Sox. New York has headed the league throughout the season with the exception of a week or two when the Cubs and Philadelphia took the lead for a time. Their lead has been from care to eleven games throughout and it was only a few weeks ago that they were hard pressed by Philadelphia.

On the other hand the White Sox have had to fight hard for the bunting with Boston as their chief running mate. It was by a sensational run of good playing and the failure of Boston to keep up the pace that Rowland and his men gained and maintained the lead a little over a month ago. The Sox made a sensational run of winning games while Boston went into a slump which cost them the pennant.

Comparing dope of the two teams is very hard unless the men are taken according to their ability in their own league. Many of course consider the American league superior to the national and that records made in that league stand for more than those made by players in the other circuit. There is no doubt that the American league has the largest gathering of star players, but whether the class of ball played is superior and will ultimately be an open question.

McGraw is one of the old school of managers and has had plenty of experience in coaching men. He is a driver and wins a large share of his games through the fighting spirit which he instills in the men. Several trades in which he secured the advantage have also helped him in gathering his team together in winning combination. He got Herzog from Cincinnati in a trade for Mathewson, a pitcher whose arm had seen its service. Herzog, on the other hand, has been up to expectations and has played the game of his life. Helene Zimmerman, the former Chicago Cub man, has filled a big hole in the Giants' infield and likes to play with that team. He is a natural fit with the Cub machine and he seems to have struck his place.

McGraw knows how to handle "Zim" and has him in the game at all times. Rowland has certainly made good with the White Sox in his second year as manager. He has a team of strong players who were far in the lead of any combination in the American league. He has secured a large share of his team through the fighting spirit which he instills in the men. The seat sale for the series will be larger than that of previous series without a doubt. The White Sox, who have been copping the American league title, letters by the bushel were coming to the offices for reservations of seats for the series. Consistently, however, the team has given the followers of the team the first opportunity of getting the seats. Chicago fans will be given the first call because they are the ones who supported the team throughout the season. The seat sale in New York, now that the pennant is assured in that city, has also been very large.

HARRY GREB TO MEET MIKE GIBBONS NEXT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Sept. 25.—Harry Greb, Pittsburgh's pride in the middleweight division, has been making opponents stiff and has been defeating them on points with such regularity that he now looms as the only possible opponent of class for Mike Gibbons, the great St. Paul boxer who will meet one of the others. He's so good a match that most of those in his class don't sound a bit good to the average promoter.

Harry Greb, however, there is a youth who seems unbeatable. He has come along so fast of late and seems to be so good that it seems logical for him to stick on Mike.

Several such a match has been made—but Pittsburgh and other promoters—but it hasn't been made attractive enough yet for Mike. Gibbons is growing out of the light game to a certain extent, partly because his brother Tom looks perfectly able to take care of the family reputation, and partly because Mike is reaching

MORRIS MILLER

Jack Bulger, manager of the eminent exponent of boxing as a business, Al McCoy, rises to protest against boxers breaking engagements, and advises promoters to insist on contracts giving money to guarantee appearance. Mr. Bulger adds that he dismissed Walter Mohr from his stable because the latter failed to keep an engagement to box at the Broadway Sporting Club.

Mr. Bulger fails to explain that Mohr, presumably through a match made by Bulger, had been engaged to fight Friday night and did not feel able to go through with another hard battle on Saturday night. As a matter of fact no boxer should be asked to box more than once a week, especially in a ten-round bout. Clubs should refuse to accept a boxer as a contestant when it is known that he is to box at another club one or two days previous to the date of the match with the boxers, but is with the managers and promoters.

Johnny Tillman, the Minnesota lightweight, has nothing but praise for Benny Leonard, the king of the lightweight domain. "I've boxed Leonard twice," says Tillman, "and have a pretty good idea of what he's got. My only complaint is that he's a regular fighter!"

"I've boxed all of them and just got through a sport time back with Charley White and Johnny Griffith. But I must say that Leonard is the best fighter I ever saw. When he hits you he takes it all out of you and I never have seen a man so fast as he is following up an advance. He nailed me on the chin with a short left that didn't travel six inches, I'll swear to that. I went down, you can bet. It so happened that it was near the end of a round, otherwise I don't know what would have come of it. I was pretty silly when I got to my feet."

If the opinion of the leading army officers, who have been in active touch with the various officers' training camps throughout the country, are accepted by college authorities, one of the first results of the war will be a more general participation in athletic competition, not only among college students, but young men of every class. An analysis of the principal reasons for the rejection of many candidates for officers' commissions reveals the fact that most of them were for defects, either physical or mental, which could have been corrected by the proper kind of athletic exercise. One prominent army officer is quoted as saying that most of the rejected men who came under the permanent inspection were not accepted because of "physical sloppiness," unclean habits and inability to decide quickly.

But the west is coming back. The Cardinals and Reds have the earmarks of hot contenders again next season, and a good many wise baseball men are predicting that the Giants will disintegrate just as the champion Dodgers have done this year, because several of McGraw's most important players are getting well along in years. GERMAN PEOPLE ARE BEHIND THE KAISER ROOSEVELT DECLARES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 25.—The attitude of the German-American Press and the German Alliance in this country in their hearty support of the German government and the attitude of the Germans at home toward their government shows that they are back of it. Col. Roosevelt gave a speech at Old Glory week festival here tonight in commenting on the theory that the United States is fighting the German government but not the people.

"For no nation does Germany feel and express such bitter and contemptuous hostility as for the United States," he said. "There is no nation on the globe which the United States would be more delighted to ruin and plunder. Under such circumstances the public men and newspapers engaged in defending Germany or assailing England and her allies or protesting against the war and demanding an inconclusive peace are guilty of moral treason to this country, and while the German-American press has achieved much credit for its attitude in this matter the professional anti-English and Irish papers are as bad and the purely sensational demagogic and unpatriotic section of the American press is the worst of all."

INDIANA PREPARES FOR HARD SCHEDULE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 25.—Football practice is under way at Indiana university in preparation for the opening game of the season with Franklin college here Sept. 29. Ewald "Jumbo" Stiehmel, director of the team, is facing a difficult problem, for instead of the usual large number of candidates reporting for practice, fewer than twenty responded to the call this year.

Of the nineteen men awarded letters in football last season, thirteen have enlisted for military service and seven members of last year's freshman team have returned to the service. Coach Stiehmel, however, takes the view that other members of the conference have suffered just as severely, from an athletic point of view, through the patriotism of the students.

"The football prospects are anything but bright, but I have no doubt that the players who are handicapped in the same way, so we should be able to hold our own," Coach Stiehmel said.

The announcement that Russell G. Harvey, a candidate who had received an appointment to West Point last spring, would return to Indiana, has added to the chances of the Crimson.

NEBRASKA'S POTASH BUSINESS PERMANENTLY ESTABLISHED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 25.—Nebraska's potash lakes are doing their part in this war and plants for working the potash from the waters of the lakes are springing up in western Nebraska like mushrooms in a new mining region. Plenty of capital is offered to finance the projects, and the work is not to be discontinued after the war according to those engaged in the business.

A University of Nebraska professor discovered that the lakes in the sand hill region of East Alliance, Neb., were very rich in potash in use working the potash from the later. Most of the potash furnished the world came from Germany before the war, and the domestic potash proves to be a valuable aid to America in its war work, now that the original importation supply is cut off.

One of the largest plants is now being built near Alliance. The water bearing potash being pumped from the lakes twenty miles away. Thousands of men are employed in the industry and the plants are carefully guarded against bomb plots and other pro-German activities.

EXPECT FIREWORKS AT THE REICHSTAG

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Sept. 25.—There may be some fireworks of the German brand when the Reichstag meets in Berlin tomorrow.

It will be the first session of the German parliament since Chancellor George Michaelis was inducted into office in July. The Centerists and members of the Left party combined at that time in demands that the government state its position on the Reichstag formula of peace "without annexations" and also that equal suffrage be granted. The upshot was the Reichstag sitting adjourned.

Michaelis was appointed, made a non-committal address to the Reichstag outlining his policies, and the Reichstag sitting adjourned.

Since that time considerable opposition has developed against Michaelis according to word which has just leaked out of Germany. Certain of the extreme radical elements in Germany have not hesitated to declare that Michaelis is even more representative of the militarists than Hohenzollern. His refusal to date clearly his policies, and his refusal to name the near-radicals distrustful of him, Dr. Matthias Erzberger, the Clerical (Catholic) leader who assumed leadership of the revolution in the July session of the Reichstag, has been quoted recently as severely critical of Michaelis.

Erzberger, a Catholic, is undoubtedly anxious that Germany go the way of the extreme radical elements. Benedict's recent peace suggestions. He may seek to force Michaelis' hand on this matter.

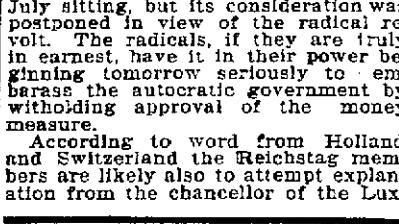

Over all, however, it appears that the "revolvers" may be beginning to realize the sweeping reforms promised by the Kaiser are still empty promises, and that Michaelis has been replaced by an even stronger militarist taskmaster, from whom there is not the slightest hope of obtaining any concessions towards democratization.

The September session of the Reichstag will at once face the question of financing Germany for the next year of the war. Approval of the budget is virtually the only power which the Reichstag exercises. The budget should, in the ordinary course of events, be approved at the July sitting, but its consideration was postponed in view of the radical revolt. The radicals, if they are truly in earnest, will in their power to bring tomorrow's session to a close by withholding approval of the money measure.

According to word from Holland and Switzerland the Reichstag members are likely also to attempt explanation from the chancellor of the Luxemburg incident at Buenos Aires, where in the United States discovered that the German charge was sending messages to his home office through the Swedish embassy. Reichstag members will probably be more concerned in why Count Luxburg was unfaithful enough to send the opinions of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howk to the United States.

Germany's food administration appears likely also to come in for considerable criticism.
